Applications Now Being Accepted for the ARMA International Cobalt Award

printer friendly format email page

ARMA International is now accepting applications for the 2009 ARMA International Cobalt Award, recognizing organizations that have gone the distance to achieve excellence in managing their records and information enterprise-wide.

This is especially timely since today's business world is filled with changing laws and regulations and threats to data security and privacy, thus creating risk within all organizations. Records and information management is a crucial business function necessary to be competitive and compliant in the marketplace. The Cobalt Award celebrates organizations that have embraced this reality as part of their everyday business.

ARMA International will announce the winner of the Cobalt Award at its Annual Conference & Expo. The 2009 award will be presented in Orlando FL, October 15, 2009 to the competing organization that has best demonstrated excellence through proper policies and procedures, financial impact, and accountability.

The prestigious award is given to only those organizations that meet the highest standards of records and information management criteria identified by a group of
